

Welcome, where ever you are on your evaluation journey!

FIRST PERSON
CONSULTING

Our illustrious panellists...

Nerida Buckley, Strategy and Planning Business Partner at Sustainability Victoria

Sally Hartmanis, Senior Analyst in Health Economics and Social Policy at Delloite Access Economics

Matt Healey, Senior Consultant and Founding Partner of First Person Consulting

Amy Gullickson, Senior Lecturer at the University of Melbourne Centre for Program Evaluation

Liz Smith, AES Vice President and Founding Partner of Litmus

Nerida – What motivates and facilitates emerging evaluators to keep playing a part in the AES network and other professional networks? What disengages us from these networks?

Sally – Do you think practical evaluation examples are important? What is an example of where you would have benefited from additional practical evaluation examples?

Matt – In a sector with so many different perspectives, content areas and skillsets, what do ‘intermediate’ evaluators need to move out of the ‘fuzzy middle ground’ to become ‘expert’ evaluators?

Amy – Recognising that new and emerging evaluators come into the sector with a range of other skills and experiences, what do you feel like you still need to learn? How might we connect people who have complementary skills and experience?

Liz – What does the AES need to do to support emerging evaluators to remain relevant in our rapidly changing technology driven world?
