ReachOut's complex space

- We are purely digital and anonymous = a key part of what attracts service users
- Digital = access to ample output data
 - Important evidence of social value in its own right.

but....

gathering outcomes data
= tougher / requires creativity (bc we are anonymous)
- Keeping it real = understand what really changes for users of our services.

Inspo: Principles of Social Value (SVI)

How we developed our Social Impact Framework. First...

Our Social Impact Model

- Three components (planets)
- ‘Thinking work’ - based on our unique digital context, what else was out there, internal conversations - what is our ‘social value’?
- ‘Background – Digital Analytics, MH interventions, road-testing the new model

How we developed our Social Impact Framework. Second...

Our Social Impact Framework

- Analysis of existing social impact work
 - Program logics / evaluations
 - Stories of change shared by young people
- Stakeholder involvement
 - Esp. our service delivery team
 - Young people

The 6 outcome domains we're working towards

Mental health literacy

“I have better knowledge and understanding about mental health”

2

Connection

“I feel more connected to others”

Better understanding of self

“I have a better understanding of what I’m/the young person I’m supporting is going through”

Sense of agency

“I feel more in control managing challenges to my/my child’s mental health”

Relief from negative feelings

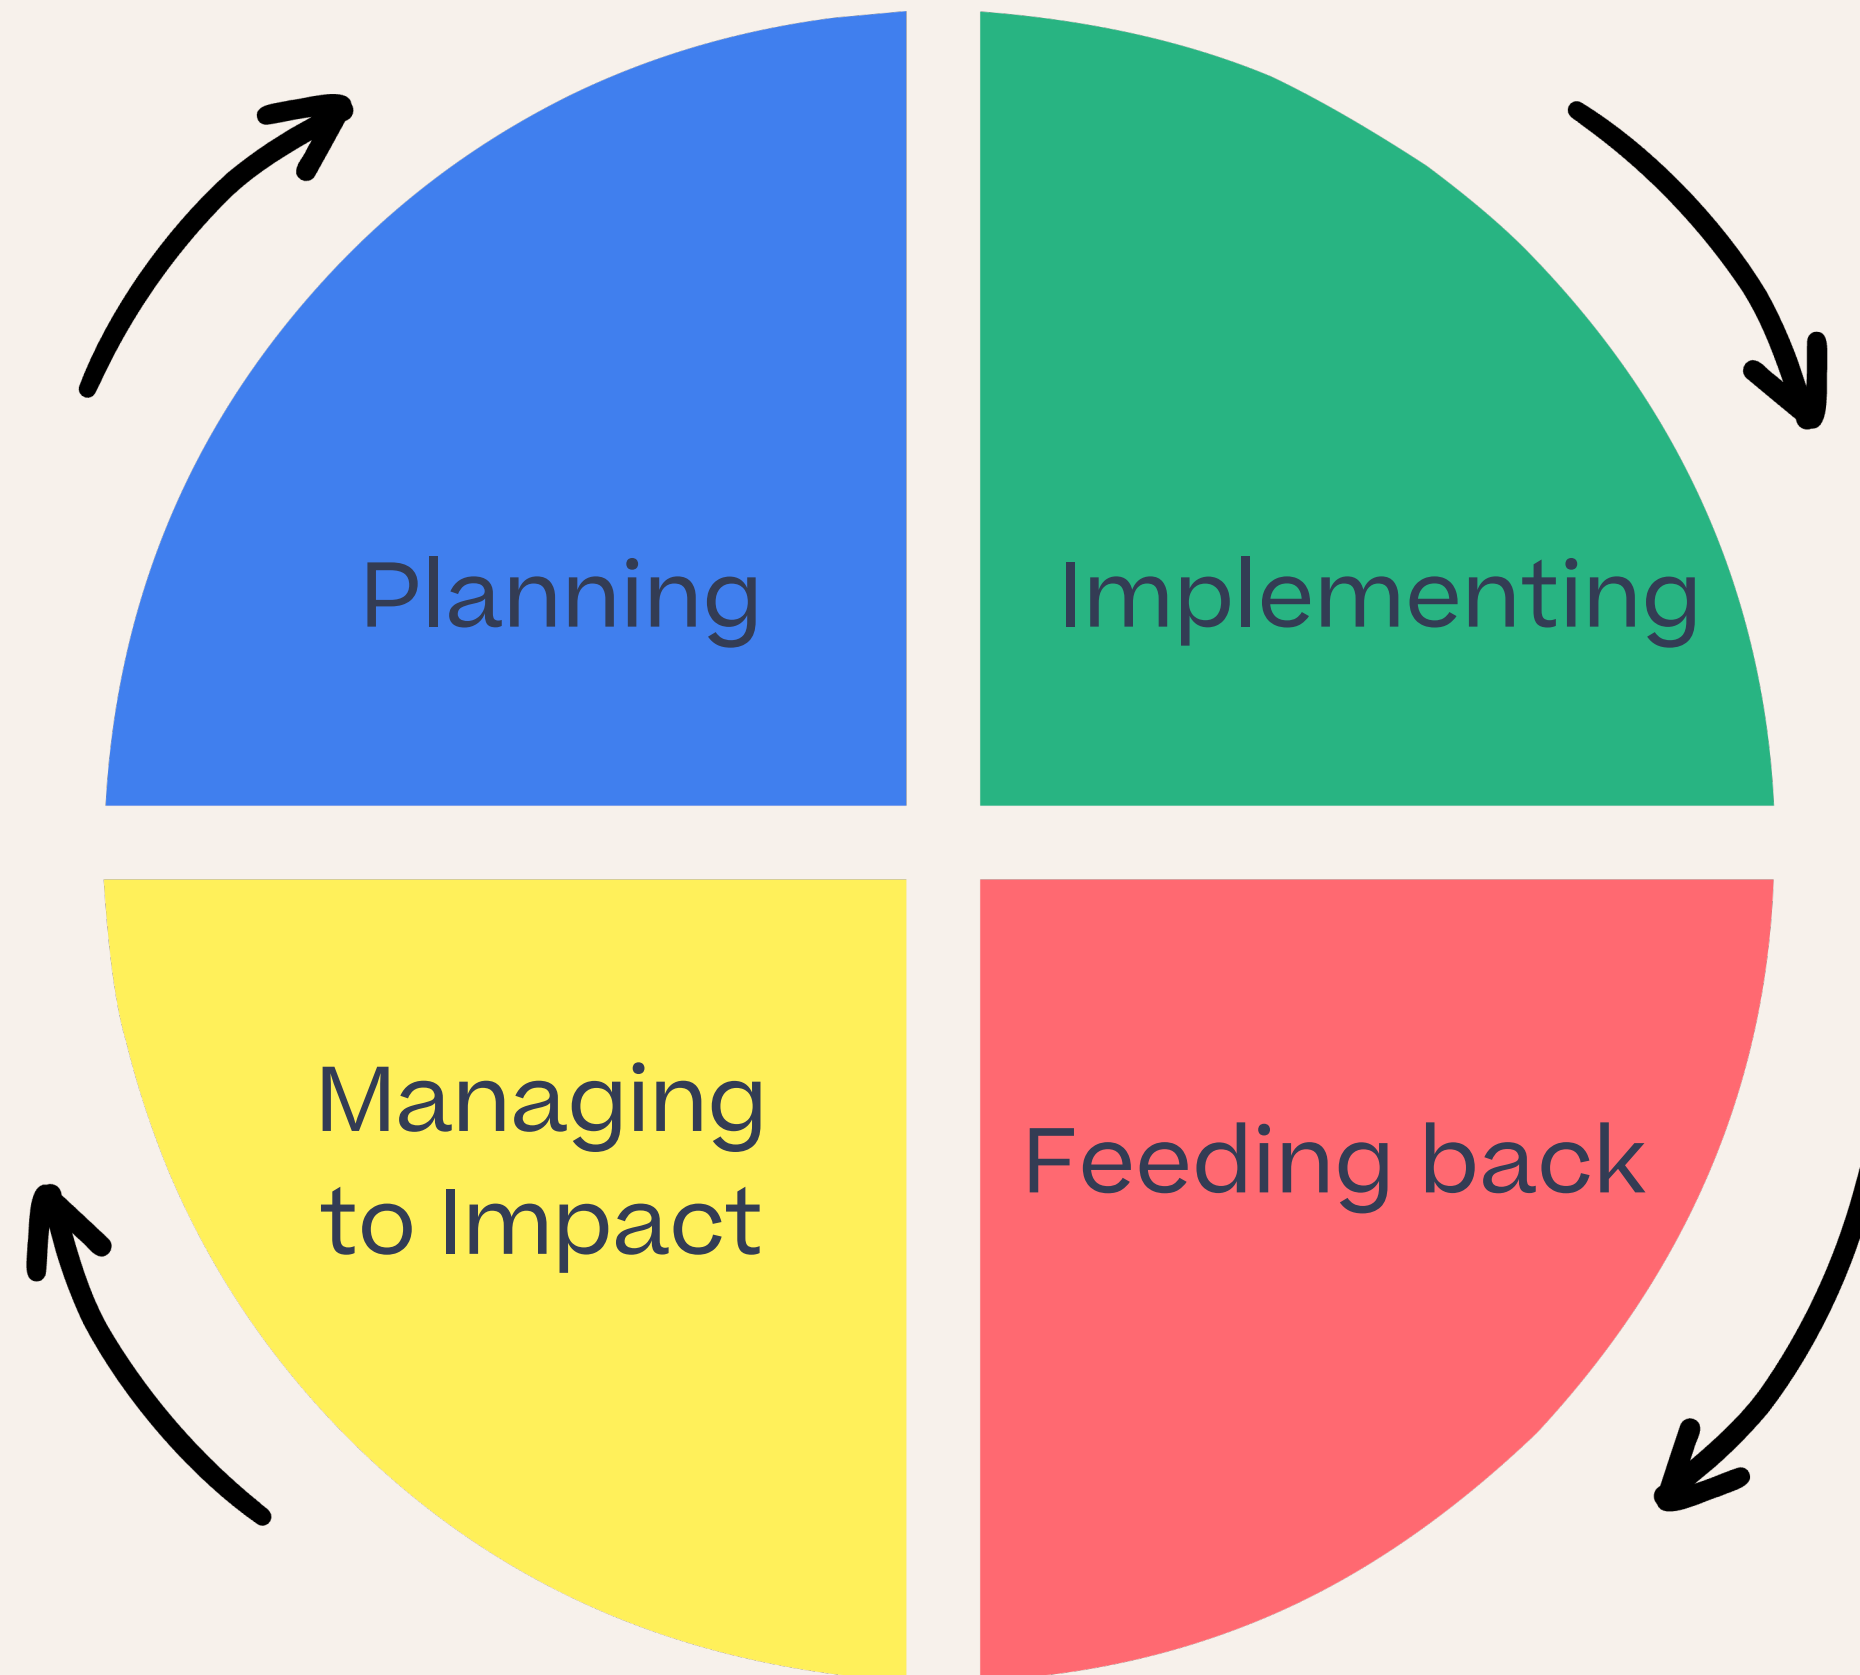

“I feel better than I did before”

Validation

“I feel OK about who I am and what I’m experiencing or feeling”

Our Social Impact cycle

Lessons from the frontline - 10 things that have helped

1. Recognising it's not a side hustle
2. Make sure you have infrastructure and staffing to support it
3. Talking about the SVI Principles can help reset expectations
4. Recognise it's a form of change management
5. Play the long game

Lessons from the frontline - 10 things that have helped (continued)

6. Democratisise SIM - don't let it be a mystery
7. Show people what's in it for them
8. Keep it collaborative (where you can)
9. Recognise the value of data you already have
10. Keep it simple
